

ABSTRACT

A method for selecting a resource from a plurality of resources includes determining a score for that resource on the basis of a stochastic property of that resource. An interval corresponding to that resource is then defined to have an extent that depends on the score. A particular resource is then selected by generating a random number and selecting that resource when the random number falls within the interval.